Stakes At the end of World War II in 1945, India is facing severe food shortages. President Mohammed Zafrullah Khan of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan comes to India with a mission to help India. He has two objectives: to acquire grain for India and to prevent the Soviet Union from winning the battle for influence in Afghanistan. As the two countries' relations unfold, the president's son Meghraj and his friend Komal come to know what it takes to get ahead in life. They decide to change the status of the immigrant community by challenging the current education system in India and developing a new, better one. The film follows their journey from the slums of Calcutta to the halls of power in India.
